

NATHALIE KARG

15 New York Group Shows You Need to See This July

ARTSY EDITORIAL
BY CASEY LESSER
JUN 28TH, 2016 12:58 AM

While the summer months may signal a slowdown for much of the New York art world, it's the prime time to find thoughtfully curated group exhibitions in galleries across the city. This summer is no exception, with a strong, varied sampling—from exhibitions for finding fresh, lesser-known names, to an ambitious all-female show, to one blue-chip gallery's ode to its artist-employees. Find our 15 picks below.

"Boys and Girls Can Still Draw" at Nathalie Karg

JUL. 6–AUG. 26, 291 GRAND STREET, FOURTH FLOOR

Marina Adams, Joe Andoe, Peter Barrickman, Gaby Collins-Fernandez, Steve DiBenedetto, Andrej Dubravsky, Andreas Fischer, Joe Fyfe, Margrit Lewczuk, Erica Mahinay, Amir Nikravan, Joanna Pousette-Dart, Kristen Schiele

Andreas Fischer
Winter Promise (the significance of measures that could extend foc...
Nathalie Karg Gallery

Amir Nikravan
Desktop III, 2015
Nathalie Karg Gallery

Spanning acrylic and oil paintings, gouache and paper collages, patchworks made from fabrics and paint, silkscreens, and colored pencil drawings, this show brings together an expansive group of two-dimensional works to explore the relationship between painting and drawing. The 13 featured artists were each asked to contribute new paintings and drawings; for some artists, the pieces they've contributed are interrelated (works on paper are predecessors to paintings on canvas), while for others the two mediums represent distinct practices.

NathalieKarg.com
Info@NathalieKarg.com

291 Grand Street, New York, NY, 10002

Tel: (212) 563 7821